GOD HELP THE POOR.

Darkly the winter day
Dawns on the moor:
How can the heart be gay;
Who can endure;
See the sad, weary wight,
Wanders from noon to night,
Shelterless, homeless quite!
God help the poor!

Now the red robin here,
Sits on the sill;
Not e'n a grain of bere
Touches its bill;
So with the houseless poor,
Wand'ring from door to door,
Seeking a morsel more!
Lord, 'tis thy will!

White is the virgin snow,
Bitter the morn;
See those starved children go,
Wretched, forlorn!
Feet without shoes or hose,
Backs without warm clothes,
Strangers to calm repose—
Why were they born?

See that lone, aged man,
Snow white his hair;
Mark his sad visage wan,
Deep his despair,
Craving the rich man's food,
Owner of many a rood,
Lord, thou art always good,
Hear his heart prayer!

Yonder a woman goes,
Ragged and old,
Barefooted o'er the snow,
Famished and cold;
How her poor children cling
To her side, shivering,
Chickens beneath her wing
Doth she enfold!

Fast falls the sleet and rain,
Slowly they go,
By forest side, sheltered plain,
Wailing their woe;
City street now they see,
Here they roam wild and free,
Canst thou say "no?"

Night spreads her sable wing,
Where can they lie?
Sorrows like theirs must bring
Tears to the eye;
Full the cloud torrent falls,
Down they must lie in halls,
Each to his maker calls,
"Lord! let me die!"

Ye whom the heavens bless,
Give from your store;
'Twill ne'er make your treasures less,
Must make them more:
For he that gives cheerfully,
God loves so tenderly,
Give to them—pray with me,
God help the poor.

"It Will all be Right in the Morning!"

BY CEPHAS.

When the bounding beat of the heart of love,
And the springing step grow slow:
When the form of a cloud in the blue above,
Lies dark on the path below;
The song that he sings is lost in a sigh,
And he turns where a star is dawning,
And he thinks, as it gladdens his heart and his eye,
"It will all be right in the morning!"

When "the strong man armed," in the middle watch,
From life's dim deck is gazing,
And strives, through the wreck of the tempest, to catch
A gleam of the day-beam's blazing;
Amid the wild storm, there hard by the helm,
He heeds not the dark ocean yawning,
For this song in his soul not a sorrow can 'whelm:
"It will all be right in the morning!"

When the battle is done, the harp unstrung,
Its music trembling—dying;
When his woes are unwept, and his deeds unsung,
And he longs in the grave to be lying,
Then a voice shall charm, as it charmed before,
He had wept or waited the dawning;
They do love therefor aye—I'll be thine as of yore—
"It will all be right in the morning!"

A Select Story.

ELSIE RAYMOND.

BY VIRGINIA F. TOWNSEND.

"Wait a moment, grandma, I just want to run out, and say good-bye to Daisy;" and the sweet face, set in a frame work of bridal-hat flowers, looked a moment through the open door, and then vanished, before the lady, in her Quaker satin and white muslin cap, could reply.

"What, isn't Elsie here!" The questioner was a young, fine looking man, and there was something peculiarly attractive in the smiling of his dark expressive eyes, as they swept the room with a single glance, and then lighted on the old lady.

"She's just run out, Alden, to bid Daisy good-bye. You know it wouldn't do to go off without seeing her old nurse, any how. Everything's packed, isn't it?"

"Yes, and the carriage is waiting;" and as the young man spoke, a tide of gleeful laughter rolled up to their ears from the company below stairs. The old lady did not mind it. She came close to the newly-made husband, and laid her hand on his shoulder. "Alden," she said, very earnestly, "now the hour has come for our parting, I can think of many things I want to say to you, and I ought to have done this before. But it's too late now. Oh, Alden, you will be very tender of my darling, won't you? You will never forget how she has been watched and cared for, (it may be too much,) and how she has never known a harsh word in the home whence you are taking her?"

The old lady's voice was pleading, almost to sadness, and her eyes were full of tears; but dimmed as they were, she saw the look of beautiful tenderness that flashed into the young man's expressive features.

"Do not fear to trust me, Mrs. Williams," he said, solemnly taking both her hands in his. "Her happiness shall be the one great aim of my life. The love that has watched over, the tenderness that has guarded her girlhood from the very shadow of evil, shall be increased a hundred fold in the home to which I take her;" and had you heard those eloquent tones, and seen the look which accompanied them, you would have predicted a joyous wedded life for Elsie Raymond.

"I do believe you, Alden, my boy," answered the old lady, fervently. "But sometimes you may find Elsie a little impatient, or self-willed. I don't like to say it, for her heart's always in the right place, only you know how quick and impulsive she is, and she don't bear contradiction, for I s'pose she's a spoiled child."

"Who's a spoiled child?" asked a voice so sweet it would have thrilled your heart like a sudden out-break of harp-music, and the graceful figure of the girl-bride sprang into the room.

Rubens ought to have seen her at that moment. With her blue, sparkling eyes, the half blush gathering into her soft cheeks, and the arch smile breaking over her lips, as morning sunshine breaks into the heart of mountain roses, she was just the vision of outward, joyous earth-loveliness that his soul would have delighted in. Her white hat with its loopings of lace and ribbon, and her rich traveling dress, harmonised with the rare, English creaminess of her complexion, and altogether she looked to the loving eyes that now rested on her, so bright, and sparkling and happy, that they forgot everything but her beauty.

"Grandma's been saying bad things about me," said the bride, with a pretty pout, that any young husband would have thought worth a dozen kisses. "Now, Alden, don't you let her frighten you one bit, for I'm going to be just the most loving, obedient little wife in the world, and never do a thing you say I musn't, as long as I live."

"I shan't say 'musn't' very often, darling," answered the young husband, stroking the curls that fell out of the little hat. "But come, Elsie, we shan't be in time for the cars. Say good-bye to your grandmother, quick."

"I'll be a good girl, indeed I will," whispered the trembling lips, as they drew up to the grandmother's; and the smiling face was dim with tears.

"God bless you, Elsie, my child!"

And her husband hurried her away.

Elsie Raymond's future must tell the story of her past. Both her parents lay under the spring grass before she had learned to know them, and so she went to her grandmother's heart and home. There, only sunshine lay over her life. The tender, indulgent grandmother forgot there must come an hour when the clouds would rise, and the great life storms descend upon the flower that grew up in such beauty at her hearthstone.

Elsie had one of those fine, rich, impulsive natures, that especially require judicious training. This she had never received from her grandmother, and the under-current of self-will and pride in her nature had gained depth and force, which, in her early girlhood, only revealed themselves in her impatience of mild reproof, or contradiction.

But usually she was so loving, so gentle, so transparent—and, as I said, her future must tell her past.

Two years had gone swiftly, happily by.—Mr. and Mrs. Raymond sat at their breakfast table that morning. The room with its appliances of taste and luxury, was one of those rare home-gems, that only an artist can appreciate.

But the little wife, behind the silver coffee urn, in her fawn colored morning gown, with its tassels of blue silk, was, after all, the crowning beauty of the sweet home-scene.

"Alden," said Mrs. Raymond, as she passed his second cup of coffee, "won't you just put down that paper, and listen to me a moment. You know that party you promised me, almost a year ago. Well, I've decided to have it next week. It's just the season for it now, and we'll make a grand effort to have it pass off well."

If Mrs. Raymond had at that moment looked narrowly at her husband's face, she would have seen it grow pale at the mention of the party.

"I'm sorry, Elsie," he commenced, moving restlessly on his chair.

"Now don't," interrupted the little wife quickly, "don't, Alden, say one word against the party, for I've quite set my heart on having it. I told the Campbells, and the Wildmans about it, more than two weeks ago, so I should die with shame to postpone it."

"You shouldn't have mentioned it to them, without consulting me first." Mr. Raymond's tones were cold and severe for the first time, but his wife would have forgiven them, had she guessed the anguish that lay at his heart.

As it was her face flushed with anger.—"Really," she answered, "I was not, until this morning, aware I was responsible to you, Mr. Raymond, for the subjects I might choose to select for conversation with my acquaintances. Once for all, what is the reason you refuse me this party?"

"I do not refuse it, Elsie, I only ask you to delay it."

"And I must and will have it next week, or never. I cannot see why you wish me to postpone it, unless it be because you know the delay will greatly annoy me."

The young man's pale face flushed with the pain her words had occasioned him. "Elsie," and his voice was quieter, and sterner than before, "you cannot move me by these accusations because you know as well as do I, there is no truth in them. I have some heavy payments to meet this week, and that alone was the reason of my requesting you to defer this matter. All I have to say is, you will be quite as likely to accomplish your wishes by presenting them in a less dictatorial manner."

It was very unfortunate for Mr. Raymond that he added to his explanation that last remark; for now that he assigned a motive for the delay, his wife's heart had begun to soften toward him, but that last speech hardened it again.

"I don't believe a word of what you're saying, Alden Raymond," she answered, pushing back her chair, and bursting into a flood of passionate tears. "If the money had made any difference, you'd have told me before this late day; and it's only because you want to mortify me now before the world, that you're so stingy this morning. I wish I was back again in my old home, with grandma, and dear old Daisy, who would never have spoken to me the harsh, cruel words that you have just done. I wish I was back there again, and that I had never left it for, and that I had never seen you, Alden Raymond!"

And springing from her seat, the lady burst out of the room, and her husband made no effort to detain her. He only leaned his head on his hand, and groaned deeply. It was the last drop in his cup of bitterness.

An hour later the young merchant was walking up and down his counting-room, with restless step, and haggard face.

There had come a sudden revolution in the mercantile world, and his house was one of the first to feel it. "There is no chance to sail clear of this, that I see," murmured the young man, as he struck his forehead. "A few weeks, and we must all sink. I shall be a ruined man, and Elsie—" his face worked fearfully a moment, and then he resumed, "There is no way to raise the money, unless —" he stared anxiously all about him, as though he feared the terrible secret which lay behind that "unless" might have revealed itself, though it had never crossed his lips; and for the first time in his life, his face wore a look of cowardice and guilt.

"Yes; I could get it so," he said, leaning his head on his hands; "and if our affairs should happen to take a favorable turn, I could repay the note before anybody was the wiser; if not," and his voice grew hoarse, "the river or a pistol shot could settle it all."

"Elsie's little property's all swallowed up, too. God knows I meant to secure it to her, but there was no help for it, and were she to know this she'd hate me worse than ever, and maybe I can win back one of the old love-smiles to her sweet lips if—" he did not finish the sentence.

"Elsie, you can give out the invitations for your party next week. There is the money which will defray expenses," and Mr. Raymond placed a note for a thousand dollars in the lap of his wife.

It was dinner time, and Elsie had had all the morning to reflect on her conduct at breakfast, and bitterly had the young wife reproached herself for the unkind words she had spoken. But her will was unsubdued still, and when the footsteps of her husband rang through the hall, the old pride came back to her heart, the morning curl to her rosy lip, and she thought to herself, "Alden shall speak first."

And he did; and that generous deed of his overcame at once, all the pride and self-will of the really loving wife.

She sprang up quickly, and wound her white arms around her husband's neck, while tears of remorse and tenderness swept down her face. "Oh, Alden," she said, "forgive me, forgive me for the cruel words I said this morning. I have been so sorry for them. I do love you better than all the world beside, and I would not leave you for a thousand grandmothers. Say just once to me, Elsie, I forgive you,' and I shall be so happy."

He drew her bright head to his bosom, and he rained down kisses on her sweet brow, as he said, "Elsie, once and forever I forgive you, but I have been very weak, and I have suffered much this morning. Let me lay my head in your lap, and see if I shall not feel better, while you talk to me."

And Elsie sat there a long time, running her little dimpled fingers through the thick brown curls of her husband, and laying her cool lips every few moments to his fevered forehead, chatting to him in her sweet humming-bird style, of her party, and what a delightful affair it would be; dreaming little of the darkness, and sin, and shame, that was drawing closer and closer to their threshhold!

It was late morning after the party. It had been as the young wife had predicted, "a brilliant affair."

And now she walked through the elegant confusion of her parlors, and thought what glances of admiration had followed her during the evening, and how proud Alden would be when she recounted to him the compliments which the guests had bestowed upon their "beautiful hostess;" and how she had inadvertently heard Mayor Hamlin, who was pronounced the most artistic judge in the city, call her "the rare blossom of the festival." But these pleasant dreamings experienced a rude interruption.

Two rough-looking men entered the parlor, and inquired if Mr. Raymond was in.

"No," answered his wife, surprised and startled. "He went to the store this morning."

One of them replied, with a significant look around the rooms, that he was not there, they had just come from his store.

"I have not seen him since," was Mrs. Raymond's laconic rejoinder; and after conferring together a moment, the two men left the room.

The lady sank down upon a sofa, and covered her face with her hands. They were policemen, she could not disguise from herself this fact, and a vague, terrible fear took possession of her soul.

A few moments later, and her husband stood before her, wild, pale, haggard.

"Elsie," he asked hurriedly, "has there been two policemen here after me?"

"Yes, and I told them you were at the store. "Oh, Alden"—she could not finish the sentence, for he rushed from her, out into the hall, and up the stairs like a madman.

Elsie's heart died within her, and it was only by grasping the cushions of the sofa, she prevented herself from sinking to the floor. She feared—she knew not what, but the next moment the woman's heart of Elsie Raymond awoke within her. Alden, her husband, was suffering, it might be he was in disgrace and shame, and who should stand by him, and where should he find comfort and strength, but in her?

She sprang up, and though her limbs shook like a reed beneath her, and her face would not be whiter when it lay under the coffin plaits, she went straight out into the hall, and up the long stairs to his room.

The door was not locked, and she opened it without knocking. What a scene for the blue eyes of Elsie Raymond! Her husband stood in the centre of the room, with a pistol pointed at his heart. One minute more, and she had been too late.

With one loud shriek she rushed to his side, with one blow of her small, white hand, she struck the heavy pistol to the floor, and with a wild, sad cry springing from her pale lips, "Saved, saved, Alden," she wound her arms about him.

The desperate man put her away. "Saved," he cried, hoarsely, "saved to ruin, degradation, to worse than death. Leave me, Elsie, and let me do the deed now."

But she came back to him, for she would not be put away. "No, no," she answered, and her pale face shone almost like an angel's, with its beautiful wife-tenderness, "did you think, Alden, your Elsie would leave you now, when your arms have sheltered her so long? Did you think she would not follow you through suffering, and shame, true and loving to the end?"

"But not to prison, Elsie, not to prison?" His head dropped as he said it.

"Yes," she answered, drawing closer, and the light of her soul was shining in her eyes, to prison, to the gallows, to death, Alden!"

And then he took her in his arms, and while his heart was wrung with deeper agony for her than for himself, he told her all.

And Elsie learned, for the first time, of the threatened collapse in her husband's business, and of the utter impossibility of his meeting the expenses of their late party without—he whispered the words—"he had forged a note for two thousand dollars!" He hoped to pay it, and so elude discovery, but matters grew worse, and he could not raise the money.

"And it was for me you did it, Alden; because I spoke those cruel words! Oh, God help me! I am to blame, not you!" cried the heart-broken wife.

But before her husband could answer her, she had sprung from her seat, and a great hope had dawned into her face.—"Alden," she cried, "it was I that ruined, it is I that will save you. I am going to that man whose name you forged, and I will beg, pray, anything, till he promises to spare you."

"Elsie," and her husband shook his head mournfully; "his heart is a hard one."

"No matter, I will find my way to it. I will not let him go till he has promised to save you. Pray God, Alden, while I am gone, pray Him without ceasing, to be with me!" She pressed one long, loving kiss upon his bowed forehead, and left him.

Mr. Holburn, the millionaire, was slowly pacing up and down his long, narrow office, with his hands behind him, as was his custom.

He was a dark, stern-looking man, with deep wrinkles set in his forehead and thin face, and altogether, it was not one that a little child, or a heart yearning for comfort and sympathy would have been drawn toward.

"Strange, strange," muttered the millionaire to himself, "that a young man of such family, occupying such a position on 'change, and in the best social circles, should have done this thing. What a sensation 'twill create! Gave that splendid party last night, too—"

Mr. Holburn's monologue was suddenly interrupted by the entrance of a lady. She made her ingress unannounced, and putting her long veil aside, revealed a face hardly yet ripened into full womanhood, yet very touching in its pale, mournful loveliness.

"I am Mrs. Raymond," she said eagerly, "and you now know for what I have come. Oh, sir! will you not spare my husband?"

"Madame," said Mr. Holburn, partially recovering himself, "it is a very painful duty to refuse you, but Justice must have her course. The offence is so palpable—"

But Elsie had sunk down at the man's feet, unable to stand. "O, sir," she cried, clasping her hands, while the tears rolled down her sweet face, "do not say that! If you ever had a mother who sang you to slumber in her arms, or a sister by whose side you knelt in prayer, or a wife whose head slumbered on your heart, by all that you have ever loved and cherished, have pity upon me, I pray you—have pity upon my husband, and spare us both from a life that will be worse than death!

"There will come a day and an hour when you will be glad that you listened to my prayer, and oh, as you hope for mercy at the judgment, show it to me now!"

And the man looked at her, as she knelt there in her mournful beauty at his feet, with her shining curls lying about her tearful face, and his heart was touched.

"I am sorry for you," he said, "but Madame, your husband has been greatly to blame."

"It was I. It was my fault," eagerly interrupted Elsie. "I instigated him to the act by my folly and extravagance. Do not accuse him, let the shame, as was the sin, be mine, but oh! you will not kill us, will you?"

The stern heart melted. Mr. Holburn raised the young wife gently, and whispered: "Mrs. Raymond, I will prosecute the thing no farther. Your husband is safe."

A half hour later, Elsie burst into the room where sat her husband. "Look up, Alden," she cried, exultingly; "I have saved you!—I have saved you!"

But this sudden joy, after those hours of exquisite suffering, was too much even for the man's strong physical endurance, and as the glad words died on Elsie's lips, her husband dropped senseless to the floor.

A week had passed. It was a soft star-bright April evening, the closing of one of those days that come up, golden wanderers from the Tropic, and shake hands with the month's gloom, and chill and mist.

Alden Raymond sat in his large easy chair, in the pleasant room where we met him at breakfast, and Elsie sat on the chair arm.—She looked very charming and very happy too, albeit there was a deeper, more subdued beauty in her whole face, but you would have loved it better than all the sparkle of the old times.

"And so, Alden," said the little wife, running her fingers through her husband's hair, "grandma writes she will be with us next month, as soon as May brings the clover wind to her bed-room window. I am so glad, and now your business has turned out so favorably, we shall be very happy. I cannot thank God enough when I think of it!"

Alden drew his arms round the slender waist.

"Yes, darling, the worst is over now," he answered. "Our business is on a properous footing again; thank God, as you say! I have this afternoon paid Mr. Holburn all that debt. We should be very happy, if it were not for that one terrible memory, Elsie;" his head dropped on her shoulder.

The wife put down her rosy lips to his ear, and whispered softly, "Don't think about it, dear Alden. It was all my fault, not yours, you know, and what a lesson has it been to us both. We will never quarrel again."

And Elsie kept her word, and when her grandmother returned home from her happy visit she said to Daisy, with tears in her eyes,

"I have no fears for Elsie now; she is the best wife in the world, and she has the best husband, too."

So Elsie Raymond's first quarrel with her husband was her last one.

Miscellaneous.

A Princess Selling her Soul.

We copy the following story from the Court Journal:—The utmost interest has been experienced in the fashionable circles all over the continent by the publication of the brochure of the Princess de S., which, printed at first in small numbers and for private circulation only, has gradually spread itself throughout the aristocratic and religious coteries of Europe. It is now exactly a year since the young Princess Eleanore de S., in the prime of her youth and beauty, a young wife, adored by her husband, and much beloved by her family, died suddenly at the Hotel de S., in Paris, and was buried in great pomp at Pere La Chaise, where a splendid monument, by Lechene, recording her age, her lineage and virtues, has just been put up by her disconsolate husband. In spite of the high position held by the Princess, and from her great wealth and beauty having become the observed of all observers, there has always existed an extraordinary feeling of mystery in the public mind with regard to the circumstances of her death. The sudden determination, taken immediately after the event by her mother-in-law, of retiring to a convent, greatly increased the doubt and wonder spread around the whole affair, and now this pamphlet comes to fill us with a deeper amazement than we can well bear. The pamphlet is printed in German, and in it the whole life of the princess is set forth. A child of immense imagination and power, left at an early age an orphan with the consciousness of beauty and the command of boundless wealth, finding herself suddenly transported to her guardian's old castle in the Hartz, was not likely to enjoy either content or happiness; and here her temper grew so wild and untractable, that after repeated efforts at home education, it was deemed advisable to send her to be trained into rule and discipline by seclusion in a convent. The child was placed beneath the surveillance of the superior of the Sacre Cœur, in the Rue de Varennes, where she could be better trained to habits of obedience than elsewhere. But, alas! this first experiment proved totally abortive. Three unsuccessful efforts at escape were followed by a decided attempt to set fire to the furniture of her room where she was confined; and the governess, fearful of the effect of such example on other pupils, and weary of the task of taming this wild, vehement spirit, reluctantly restored the young lady to the care of her guardian. A conseil de famille was held, and it was resolved to send the culprit, now no longer a mere child, but a fine, high spirited girl of fifteen, to England, to complete her education, with the hope that the conviction of being thus alone in a foreign country, dependent upon her good behaviour to ensure the kindness of those about her, might have the desired effect. The young lady was accordingly placed at ——, at Hammersmith, and for a time the hoped for change seemed to have taken place in her temper. But, after a while, it appears that the bursts of violence to which she gave way, and the fits of depression which succeeded, became so alarming as to cause serious fears for her health. Letter after letter was despatched to her guardian from the young lady herself, begging to be taken into favor, declaring that the climate of England was weighing her to the earth, and the discipline of Hammersmith breaking her heart. For some time the guardian, acting with the prudence he thought necessary, suffered these complaints and supplications to go on; but at length, moved by one of the letters more heart-rending than the others, he allowed his anger to be melted, and determined on fetching his ward from the place, where she declared, in the strong language she was wont to use, she was 'damaging both soul and body and hurrying both to everlasting perdition.' The Prince de S. arrived at Hammersmith one Sunday morning. The lady commissioned to be bearer of the news reported to have seen her on her knees alone in her room praying, with a most fearful expression of countenance, and, on being informed of her guardian's arrival, she had uttered a most unearthly shriek and rushed down the stairs like one possessed. The guardian was much pleased with her progress and improvement, and brought her back to Paris triumphantly, as a specimen of the good training of the ladies of Hammersmith. There was, indeed, no token of the old indomitable spirit left within her. She was silent and subdued, submissive to all, and only urgent in her supplications never to be left alone or in the dark. She to whom religion had hitherto been a subject of derision, changed suddenly to practices of the most exaggerated piety, but always persisted in maintaining that it was useless to lay any plans for her welfare, for that she should die before she was 21!

The Princess, in the brochure, says:—'Even when she became the bride of my son Leon, she would insist upon every arrangement being made with a view to this early death, which seemed to prey on her mind for ever. It was not till the young couple had been married for some time that, by dint of maternal care and solicitude, I managed to wring from her the confidence of her direful anticipations; and judge of my dismay when she coolly told me she had sold herself to the Evil One, and she would be claimed before she had reached the age of 21! She confessed that her despair had been so great at being exiled, that, wearied with incessant prayers to Heaven and the saints for deliverance without effect, she had at length addressed her vows to the powers of darkness on the very Sunday morning when her guardian had arrived, and the announcement of his presence was evidently the token of the acceptance of that fearful vow.' It seems that, in spite of every care and counsel, despite of the constant watching and wise teaching of the Abbe Dupauloux, nothing could turn aside the idee fixe from the mind of the Princess Eleanore; and, although every extreme of dissipation and excitement were tried to divert her thoughts she gave way to a settled melancholy, and died just two days before the completion of her 21st year, suddenly, and in her chair, full dressed for a ball at the Ministre d'Etat. The pamphlet has caused the deepest impression on the minds of all who have perused it, and the retirement from the world of the Dowager Princess de S., for the avowed purpose of praying for the soul of the Princess Eleanore, has added to the terrible effect of the tale, which seems more like a dark legend of the middle ages than an incident of yesterday; but is, nevertheless, perfectly true for all that.

Beautify your Homes.

Every man should do his best to own a home. The first money he can spare ought to be invested in a dwelling, where his family can live permanently. Viewed as a matter of economy, this is important, not only because he can ordinarily build more cheaply than he can rent, but because of the expense caused by frequent change of residence. A man who in early life builds a house for a home for himself and family, will save some thousands of dollars in the course of twenty years, besides avoiding the inconvenience and trouble of removals. Apart from this, there is something agreeable to our better nature in having a home that we can call our own. It is a form of property that is more than property. It speaks to the heart, enlists the sentiments, and ennobles the possessor. The associations that spring up around it, and the birthplace of children—as the scene of life's holiest emotions—as the sanctuary where the spirit cherishes its purest thoughts, are such as all value; and whenever their influence is exerted, the moral sensibilities are improved and exalted. The greater part of our happiness in this world is found at home; but how few recollect that the happiness of to-day is increased by the place where we were happy on yesterday, and that insensibly scenes and circumstances gather up a store of blessedness for the weary hours of the future! On this account we should do all in our power to make home attractive.—Not only should we cultivate such tempers as serve to render its intercourse amiable and affectionate, but we should strive to adorn it with those charms which good sense and refinement so easily impart to it. We say easily, for there are persons who think that a home cannot be benefitted without a considerable outlay of money. Such people are in error. It costs little to have a neat flower garden, and to surround your dwelling with those simple beauties which delight the eye far more than expensive objects. If you will let the sunshine and the dew adorn your yard, they will do more for you than any artist. Nature delights in beauty. She loves to brighten the landscape and make it agreeable to the eye. She hangs ivy around the ruin, and over the stump of a withered tree twines the graceful vine. A thousand arts she practises, to adorn the scene and please the mind. Follow her example, and do for yourself what she is always laboring to do for you. Beauty is one of God's chosen forms of power.—We never see creative energy without something beyond mere existence, and hence the whole universe is a teacher and inspirer of beauty. Every man was born to be an artist, so far as the appreciation of beauty is concerned.

The Speakership.

There may be many names prominent before the next House of Representatives of this State for the Speakership, and in this connection Col. J. M. B. PETRIKEN, of Lycoming county, is favorably mentioned. He is a gentleman of fine address, and popular manners, and if selected to that post, would make an excellent and impartial officer. He is a sterling, hard-working democrat, and during the late contest, labored with untiring industry for the success of the democratic nominees; but his election was generally considered by the party as a great triumph, and his selection as Speaker would be hailed with pleasure by his numerous friends.

Thanksgiving in Pennsylvania.

PENNSYLVANIA, ss.—In the name and by the authority of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. James Pollock, Governor.

A PROCLAMATION.

FELLOW-CITIZENS:—A public acknowledgement to the goodness of Almighty God, and of our constant dependence upon his providence, is eminently becoming a free and enlightened people.

As the "Giver of every good and perfect gift, He has crowned the past year with His goodness and caused our paths to drop with fatness." Our Free Institutions, our rights and our privileges, civil and religious, have been continued and preserved; Science and Art, with the great interests of Education, Morality and Religion, have been advanced, industry, in all its departments has been honored and rewarded, and the general condition of the people improved.

Our Commonwealth has been greatly blessed. The ravages of disease and death—of famine and pestilence—have not been permitted to come near us; nor have the horrors of war disturbed the peaceful quiet of our homes. The earth has yielded her increase and richly rewarded the labor of the husbandman. Abundant prosperity, with smiling plenty and the blessings of health, has been ours.

Acknowledging with gratitude, these blessings of a kind Providence, let us "enter into His gates with thanksgiving and into His courts with praise; be thankful unto Him, and bless His name."

Deeply impressed with the importance and propriety of the duty, and in accordance with the wishes of many good citizens, I, JAMES POLLOCK, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, do hereby recommend THURSDAY THE 20TH DAY OF NOVEMBER NEXT, as a Day of General Thanksgiving and Praise throughout this State; and earnestly implore the people that, abstaining from all worldly business and pursuits on that day, they unite in offering thanks to Almighty God, for his past goodness and mercy, and humbly beseech Him for a continuance of His blessings.

Given under my hand, and the Great Seal of the State, at Harrisburg, this 21st day of October, in the year of our Lord, 1856, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-first.

By the Governor.

ANDREW G. CURTIN,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Sectionalism Rebuked---The General Episcopal Convention.

Amid the fanaticism which has beset several religious denominations, the phrenzy of many political preachers, and the unkind and censorious spirit indulged by certain pastors and flocks toward our brethren of the South, it is refreshing to notice the cordial, fraternal feelings which seem to animate the proceedings of the Episcopal Convention, now assembled in Philadelphia. We refer especially to their appointment of Richmond, Virginia, as the place for holding the next triennial convention. This act is well timed, and adopted by a body so well entitled to the respect and reverence of the public, cannot fail to have a most beneficial influence. The councils of this great and powerful church have been uniformly distinguished by a tolerant and conservative spirit. They truly represent the Episcopalians of the whole United States, and of each separate State and Territory.

There may be seen sitting side by side, in Christian love and fellowship, men from all the various climes of our wide-spread confederacy, eminent for their talents and virtues, and as less honored for their national patriotism than the sacredness of their functions. How different the tone of indulgence and magnanimity pervading the conduct of these reverend and honorable men from the uncandid, bitter, and intolerant utterances of those pulpit demagogues, whom we have heretofore felt it our duty to hold up to public reprobation!

We cannot imagine that we shall be thought to overrate the significance of this selection of Richmond as the next place of meeting. It is the first time the Convention has ever chosen to go so far South. As the next meeting will not be held till 1859, it is a proclamation to the North and South of the Convention's firm faith in the stability of the Union, and in the persistence of one United Church. If anything were wanting to add to the influence of these considerations, it will be found in the singular unanimity with which Richmond was fixed upon. The House of Clerical and Lay Delegates originated the proposition, and it is understood that every Northern Delegate voted for it. On reception by the House of Bishops it was agreed to unanimously. In the name of the country we thank the fathers and members of a Church that recognizes not the boundary of Mason and Dixon's line.

Don't Know what to Say.

A Black Republican stumper in Ohio was heard to say, a few days ago, that he was sick of telling these d——d Kansas lies over and over. He "wished the Republicans would get LANE back to Kansas and get up a fight or two, so as to make some new speech timber." Since peace has been restored in Kansas, the Republicans don't know what to say.

Democracy.

Democracy is the last resting place of LIBERTY, as the dove returning to the ark, because amidst the waste of waters it could not find rest for the sole of its foot. So liberty, seeking to expand its pinions over this hemisphere, often returns to the bosom of the Democracy, bleeding with the shafts which its enemies have leveled at its breast. There it hath repose; there it hath solace; there it hath disciples who worship liberty that is immortal.

We are in the midst of the nineteenth century of the Christian era; in the twentieth we shall be dust, without a tribute or memorial to our memories. "The path of glory leads but to the grave," but Liberty will survive us, and before the dread tribunal of posterity we shall be judged according to our present devotion to the essential principles which underlie the foundations of human happiness and prosperity. Present success is not material: the arts and diplomacy of ephemeral politicians may not have been bequeathed to us, but if we will deserve the laurel of honors the children of the future will bestow it.

Since it is plain that the first, last great duty of man is to foster Liberty, and to diffuse it, and to give it a habitation everywhere, let us emulate the example of the heroes whom history has placed among its defenders.

"Oh LIBERTY what crimes are committed in thy name!"

Those words were uttered upon a scaffold, in the eighteenth century; it is a hundred years later, and we repeat the cry which that martyr put up to heaven. We are not surrounded by the accessories of death, the beam, the muffled drum, the funeral bell, the scaffold; but we are surrounded by the enemies of human liberty, who would precipitate moral and physical death upon us if they had the power to do it.

The Know-Nothing party has inaugurated its natural reign in this free State, by equalized imposition of taxes, acquittal of criminals, embezzlements of public monies, employment of spies, ostracisms and persecutions of public officers. They have put trammels upon reason and thought, and freedom of action, and like the holy inquisition, they deny to free born man the imperceptible right of acting according to the dictates of his own conscience. They have shackled him with oaths repugnant to the spirit of liberty, and have deliberately violated that provision of our Magna Charta which made the soil of America an asylum for children of every clime.

But death has laid his hand upon the Order: and the organization which betrayed the existence of matter among us, is approaching its fall. A weed of unnatural growth—a vile and obnoxious seed, thrown by some unfriendly hand into our domain of freedom—it cannot flourish beneath the shadow of the tree of liberty, but it decays and dies. The sun of reason and reflection has dispelled the mists with which the tempters veiled the intellects of our free born youth. Absolved once more from their hateful thraldom—restored to their original station among their fellow-men, they press forward to swell our ranks and shout our battle-cry.

Throw wide the gates of oblivion, that it may receive into its bosom the debris of this fallen order, which carries upon its front the brand which God placed upon Cain—or let it wander, like Nazarine, in the deserts of the earth, without a home to shelter it, without a pillow to support its drooping head, without a garment to cover it, without even the power to die.

The grave which the Democratic party has dug for Black Republicanism is broad and deep enough for that also. Without the asseveration made by Macbeth to Banquo's ghost, we will fight the monster of faction in any shape, material or incorporeal Know-Nothingism, Black Republicanism, Native Americanism, or any other name which it most affects—we contend in the Constitution, and we say to you as we say to our enemies across the sea: "You may injure us in the first onset—you may destroy our seaports and burn our towns, but in the end we will entirely whip you."

From the Troy Times, October 20th.

A Shameful Affair---A Boy almost eaten up by a Dog.

Yesterday afternoon, while a boy named James O'Connell, aged about 12 years, son of Mr. Barney O'Connell, who lives on Third street, South Troy, was passing along the side-walk near his father's residence, a man, name unknown, set upon him a large and savage bull dog. The boy, on turning and seeing the dog coming full speed upon him naturally became very much frightened, and endeavored to escape by running—the man meanwhile encouraging the nobler brute on ward. Of course, the dog speedily overtook the boy. He caught the lad in the middle of the back, his teeth sinking to the bone, when, by clasping his jaws, and jerking with them, he tore out a strip clean to the bone, as large as a man's hand! His rage increasing with the taste of blood, it was now impossible to shake off the dog. He again caught the boy by the thigh, and bit out a piece as large as he could grasp with his teeth, laying the bone bare here. Another bite was inflicted upon the leg, but it was not so serious as the other. Over two pounds of flesh must have been extracted by the dog. The boy was literally being eaten up by the monster. The brute who set the dog upon the boy, deserves, as we hope he will receive, severe punishment. Dr. Burton, who was called to attend the case, did everything that lay in his power, but it is hardly possible that he can recover.

A Pretty Woman.

The subjoined waif we have discovered in an exchange:

A pretty woman is one of the "institutions" of the country—an angel in dry goods and glory. She makes sunshine, blue sky, Fourth of July, and happiness, wherever she goes. Her path is one of delicious roses, perfumes and beauty. She is a sweet poem, written in rare curls and choice calico, and good principles. Men stand up before her as so many admiration points, to melt into cream and then butter. Her words float round the ear like music, birds of Paradise, or the chimes of Sabbath bells. Without her, society would lose its truest attraction, the church its firmest reliance, and young men the very best of comforts and company. Her influence and generosity restrain the vicious, strengthen the weak, raise the lowly, flannel-shirt the heathen, and strengthen the faint-hearted. Wherever you find the virtuous woman, you also find pleasant fireside boquets, clean clothes, order, good living, gentle hearts, music, light and model "institutions" generally. She is the flower of humanity, a very Venus in dimity, and her inspiration is the breath of Heaven.

FROM NICARAGUA.

Full Particulars of the Battles of Massaya and Granada.

Terrible Scenes in Granada!—Wholesale Murders and Robberies!

Our files of New Orleans papers to the 23d are at hand. They contain the details of the late Nicaraguan news.

Capt. Williams, of Gen. Walker's army, who came as a passenger in the Tennessee, gives detailed accounts of the battles fought at Massaya and Granada. His report agrees with that telegraphed.

Gen. Walker was preparing to march in pursuit of the enemy.

The howitzers and Minnie rifles sent from New York, were received previous to the recent battles.

Minister Wheeler was dangerously ill, having been attacked with a fit of apoplexy.

CAPT. WILLIAMS' STATEMENT.

Gen. Walker was well advised of the movements of the enemy, but with his usual caution he kept his information and plans from the public. About the 1st of October, the order was given for the outgarrisons at San Carlos, Rivas, Tipitapa, and Managua, to concentrate on Granada. Shortly afterward the advanced guard at Massaya was ordered to fall back also upon the capital. It at once became evident that Gen. Walker had determined to draw the enemy on, and choose his own ground for the battle.

On the evening of the 11th, he left Granada with 1100 men for Massaya. This is a town situated some fifteen miles from Granada, containing about 8000 inhabitants. Nature has endowed it with many advantages. It has two plazas, in the centre of the principal one stands a large church, on either side a few shops. The houses are principally built of adobe. It was here that Gen. Walker had determined to meet the forces of the Allies. The troops marched nearly all night over a very muddy and slippery road, and before the morning of the 12th, were before the town, which was in possession of the enemy, who were said to be about 4000 strong.

Being advised of the approach of General Walker, they had advanced on the road from the town with a strong body of troops. Either side of the road was lined with high bushes and cactus. At daybreak Gen. Walker formed his men in column, and ordered a charge at once. The rush was made, and the enemy broke and fled before the head of the column could reach them. The Americans kept on and followed the enemy into the town, where they were strongly posted in the plazas and streets. After a gallant fight, which had lasted all through the day and evening, Gen. Walker was in position at 11 P. M., with his howitzers before the main plaza, ready to open upon the enemy in the morning. The artillery had been brought up through the walls of the houses, which were cut through for that purpose. The troops were ordered at this hour to sleep on their arms. They had fought hard, and they slept well.

About half-past 2 A. M., an express from Granada arrived, advising Gen. Walker that the city had been attacked at noon of the day before, by a force of nearly 1,400 men, these were from the hacienda of San Jacinto, and had been joined by bodies of troops from San Salvador and Guatemala, with a few Chamorristas. They had advanced upon Granada by a different road from that leading to Massaya, and had surrounded the city, attacking it on all sides. There were very few troops, which, with the American citizens left in the city, did not amount to over 150 men. These took possession of the ordnance department, guard-house, hospital, and principal church, all on the main plaza, and the ladies took refuge in the house of the American Minister and some of the foreign Consulates. The handful of men defended the plaza successfully for twenty-four hours.

The enemy ransacked every house in search of Americans and money. Mr. Lawless, the Rev. Mr. Wheeler, and Mr. Fergusson and son were dragged into the streets and murdered. Gen. Walker's residence was pillaged and his papers scattered over the floor in the wild hunt for plunder. About 10 A. M., of the 13th, the gallant band in the plaza heard the first intimation that succor was at hand in the booming of the howitzers and the rattle of the musketry in the attack of Gen. Walker on the enemy at Jalteba Church, about three-quarters of a mile immediately behind the Ordinance Department.

Immediately on receiving the news brought to Massaya by the express, Gen. Walker vacated that town with all his troops, and commenced a forced march for Granada. At 10 A. M., he attacked the enemy, who were posted in force on the height of the Jalteba Church, and charging at once, captured two field pieces, and drove them, at the point of the bayonet, into and through the city. The rout commenced in every direction. But on all sides they were met by parties that Gen. Walker had ordered to make a detour round the city, and their dispersion was complete.

It was estimated that about 400 of the allies were killed at Massaya, and an equal number at Grenada. Nearly every house on the evening of the 13th, when our informant left, was filled with their wounded. The loss of the Americans in both engagements was only 16 killed and 25 wounded. We have not been able to learn the names of any of the killed. Among the wounded are Capt. Bell, Dr. Scott, Capt. Hardy, Mr. Tabor, editor of the Nicaraguense: Capt. Green, Harbormaster, Capt. Pickersgill, and Major Giles.

The enemy were reported to be retreating from Massaya, and Gen. Walker would advance northward as soon as his troops had some little rest.

Capt. Williams informs us that his baggage was packed ready to start when the attack took place. He was rifled of everything by the enemy in the assault on Granada. In his trunk was nearly two hundred letters from persons in the United States, but he was able to gather up only a few of them, and many of these without their envelopes, after the route of the enemy. Those he saved, have been mailed here.

A company of Gen. Walker's troops are stationed on the San Juan river, at the mouth of the Serapiqui, and about 100 recruits arrived at Greytown on the Tennessee. They would proceed to Granada at once.

Captain Williams informs us that he learned from one of the men who returned from the battle of San Jacinto, that Mr. Callahan, our late esteemed correspondent, was last seen wounded, and nearly exhausted, pursued by some cavalry, and endeavoring to get into the bush. In this he did not succeed, as the horses were nearly upon him at that time.

THE SLAVERY DECREE.

We find in the papers no decree relative to the re-institution of slavery, and think the announcement of that step by the Texas, at New York a few days since, was unfounded. The following is a resume of the condition of Gen. Walker's forces and resources, published on the 11th, just before the advance on Massaya:

All the internal and external foes of the States have been straining their utmost energy to cripple us at a season when it was impossible to take the field; and yet, despite all these obstacles, the Government stands firmer than it ever did. With two thousand men capable of bearing arms, with all the improvements of warfare, with a better knowledge of the country, with a steamship line bringing means to us at every juncture, and with renewed confidence, how can we entertain an opinion contrary to the speedy and certain restoration of peace and executive authority over all the departments of the State? It is only a matter of time, of weeks, before this whole difficulty will be terminated.

Interesting from New Mexico.

[Correspondence of the St. Louis Republican.]

INDEPENDENCE, Oct. 23, 1856.

The Santa Fe mail reached here to-day. By it we have little news of importance. Business of every kind is reported to be dull, and trade, unless the mines yield more readily than usual, or the gold hunting expeditions turn out more favorably, must continue to offer little inducements to adventurers. The quartz chrushing apparatus, introduced into the Territory recently, have not yet fulfilled the sanguine expectations of the proprietors, and unless their erection is completed soon, many will begin to lose faith in the firmness of the companies.

It is certainly true that the refuse material at the "placers," if properly used, will yield very abundantly of the precious metal, and we will await with anxiety to hear of the results of the different enterprising companies who have already their apparatus in the Territory. The Indian relation with the department has not much changed since I last wrote to you. The majority of the tribes are comparatively quiet, yet, true to their natures, they cannot let an opportunity escape for committing theft. Those most noted for this are the Mescaleros, and it is said their depredations arise from the fact that the Senate failed to ratify the treaty made with them.

The Kowahs tried their hands recently in the same way, and were proceeding still further to deeds of daring in the Nabajo country, but were turned back.

In military matters, General Garland and Major Brooks were about leaving for the States. Col. Bonneville, in the absence of the General, will command the department, and has removed the Regimental Head-Quarters to Santa Fe. The Rifles, who are to replace the Dragoons, are on their way up the valley of the Del Norte; their Head-Quarters will be at Fort Union.

In local matters, the work on the State House is progressing rapidly, and before cold weather sets in the work will have reached the second story. Nothing has, as yet, been done on the penitentiary—a building, judging from the necessities of the country, which needed erection previous to any other. The summer and fall rains have been very abundant, and many houses have suffered in consequence.

On the first Monday in September the elections were held, and the Democrats have a majority in both Houses. The mail party had a pleasant trip out and in, barring one or two cold rains. In the outward bound train, Mr. Porthoff, a passenger, accidentally shot himself in the hand. Quite a number of Cheyenes and other Indians were seen on the route, but offered no violence.

Wealth of British Aristocracy.

The Duke of Bedford includes, or included, a mile square in the heart of London, where the British Museum, once Montague House, now stands, and the land occupied by Woburn Square, Bedford Square, Russell Square. The Marquis of Westminster built, within a few years, the series of squares called Belgravia. Stafford House is the noblest place in London. Northumberland House holds its place by Charing; Chesterfield House remains in Audley street. Sion House and Holland House are in the suburbs. But most of the historical houses are masked or lost in the modern uses to which trade or charity has converted them. A multitude of town places contain inestimable galleries of art. In the country the size of private estates is more impressive. From Barnard Castle I rode on the highway twenty-three miles from High Force, towards Darlington, east Ruby Castle through the estate of the Duke of Cleveland. The Marquis of Breadalbane rides out of his house a hundred miles in a straight line, to the sea, on his own property. The Duke of Sutherland owns the county of Sutherland, stretching across Scotland from sea to sea.

The Duke of Devonshire, besides his other estates, owns ninety-six thousand acres in the county of Derby. The Duke of Richmond has forty thousand at Goodwood, and three hundred thousand at Gordon Castle. The Duke of Norfolk's park in Sussex is fifteen miles in circuit. An agriculturalist bought lately the Island of Lewes, in Hebrides, containing five hundred thousand acres. The possessions of the Earl of Londsdale gave him eight seats in Parliament. This is the Heptarchy again; and before the reform of 1832, one hundred and fifty-four persons sent three hundred and seven members to Parliament. The borough mongers governed England.

These large dominions are growing larger. In 1786 the soil of England was owned by two hundred thousand corporations and proprietors; and in 1822 by thirty-two thousand. These broad estates find room on this narrow island. All over England, scattered at short intervals among shipyards, mines and forges, are the paradises of the noble, where are lifelong repose and refinement, heightened by the contrast with the roar of industry and necessity out of which you have stepped aside.—R. W. Emerson's English Travels.

CHILD CARRIED OFF BY A BEAR.—One of those fearful incidents occurred near the village of Neshota, on Saturday week, which go so far to create the thrilling interest in written romance of pioneer life. Just before sunset, a child, five years old, was seized in presence of its mother, by a full grown bear, and in spite of its screams, and the frantic efforts of its mother, was borne into the thicket. The alarm was given, and the men with clubs and firearms, commenced searching the woods, but up to Tuesday nothing had been found of it, upon which to base a conjecture with reference to its fate. Bears are quite plenty in this neighborhood, but this is the first instance where human life has been sacrificed by them, though they have frequently carried off stock from the farmers, coming up, as in this case, to the door of the house.—Manitowoc (Wis.) Tribune.

Line upon Line--Here and There a Little.

THANKSGIVING DAY.—Thursday the 20th inst., has been appointed for Thanksgiving in Pennsylvania.

☞The Black Republicans say Fremont is a "tried man." So he is. He was "tried" by a Court martial, and found guilty.

"We have about half the Congressmen and both branches of the Legislature."—Journal.

☞It's not true, and you know it. The Democrats have a majority of the Congressional delegation, and also a majority of 5 on joint ballot in the State Legislature. It is impossible for the Journal to tell the truth.

LIBEL AND FORGERY!—On Saturday last there was issued from the office of the "Huntingdon Journal," a document which has been termed "The Secret Circular," as it was intended for secret circulation throughout the county.—It is an extraordinary document, and came from the hands of a VILLAIN, whoever he may be. Through the vigilance of the "Americans" it was brought to light at an early hour. It caused great excitement and indignation among honest men of all parties, and indictments for Libel and Forgery will be instituted. A large majority of the persons whose names are attached promptly came forward and denied having any agency in the matter, which gives room for suspicion against men whom the community would least suspect of such conduct. But let them face the music!

☞Messrs. J. & W. SAXTON, proprietors of the "Metropolitan," have received a very large and handsome stock of all sorts of goods, to which they invite the attention of their numerous friends and customers. Walk in ladies and gentlemen, and take a view of their goods. You will find the salesmen very polite and agreeable.

☞PICTURES.—We would say to all our friends who may want to procure good pictures of themselves, that E. P. PRETTYMAN'S is the place to go to. Rooms at the Station House, up stairs. His pictures can't be beat in Huntingdon county. *

A VALUABLE WORK.—"Next to having something to eat is having it cooked in a style fit to be eaten. Every housekeeper does not understand this art, and, probably, only for want of a little elementary teaching. This want is easily supplied, for T. B. Peterson has just published Mrs. Widdifield's Cook Book, in which the experience of that celebrated person in this line, is given so clearly and with such precise details that any housekeeper of sufficient capacity to undertake the management of household affairs can make herself an accomplished caterer for the table without serving an apprenticeship to the business. The book is published in one volume, the typography good and paper excellent, with as much real useful information in the volume as would be worth a dozen times its price. Get it at once."

(Read what the Editor of the Ladies' National Magazine says of it in the number for October.)

"The author of this book, Mrs. Hannah Widdifield, was celebrated, for nearly fifty years, as a cake baker and pastry cook in Philadelphia. None of the receipts have ever before been published. They have been tried for years, by hundreds of Mrs. Widdifield's pupils, many of whom we know personally; and we can, therefore, conscientiously recommend them. They have, moreover, the advantage of not being too extravagant, as most receipts in modern cook books are; and they also comprise everything relating to the table, preserving, &c. We have no hesitation in pronouncing it the best work on the subject there is. The great majority of the cook books, it is well known to the initiated, are made by incompetent persons, who have never tried the receipts they profess to recommend. We advise all to purchase this one at once."

(Read what the Editor of the Dollar Newspaper says of it.)

"All the receipts in this book are now for the first time published in book form, and none of these receipts have ever before been issued in any other work but this; and we have no hesitation in saying, that we believe it will prove, on examination to all, to be the most useful and popular Cook Book ever issued. The merit of these receipts is, that they have been tried for years, and therefore can be recommended conscientiously. It is the best book on cookery and receipts that we know of, and while it will be useful to matrons, to young housewives it will be indispensable."

☞Copies of the above celebrated Cook Book will be sent to any one to any place, free of postage, on remitting One Dollar to the Publisher, in a letter. Published and for sale at the Cheap Bookselling and Publishing House of

T. B. PETERSON,
No. 102 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

To whom all orders must come addressed.

☞WANTED—Canvassers in every town and county in the United States, to engage in the sale of this popular book, to whom they will be supplied by the dozen, hundred, or thousand, at very low rates. Everybody will want it.

☞T. B. Peterson has just published an entire new catalogue, which will be sent gratis to any person, on their sending for one. October 22, 1856.

IMPORTANT TO EVERYBODY.— For the last three years, I have been engaged in a business known only to myself, and, comparatively, few others, whom I have instructed for the sum of $200 each, which has averaged me at the rate of $3,000 to $5,000 per annum; and having made arrangements to go to Europe next Spring, to engage in the same business, I am willing to give full instructions in the art to any person in the United States or Canadas, who will remit me the sum of $1. I am induced, from the success I have been favored with, and the many thankful acknowledgments I have received from those whom I have instructed, and who are making from $5 to $15 PER DAY at it, to give any person an opportunity to engage in this business, which is easy, pleasant, and very profitable, at a small cost. There is positively NO HUMBUG in the matter. References of the best class can be given as regards its character, and I can refer to persons whom I have instructed, who will testify that they are making from $5 to $15 per day at the same. It is a business in which either ladies or gentlemen can engage, and with perfect ease make a very handsome income. Several ladies in various parts of New York State, Pennsylvania and Maryland, whom I have instructed, are now making from $3 to $6 per day at it. It is a GENERAL BUSINESS, and but a few shillings is required to start it. Upon receipt of $1, I will immediately send to the applicant a printed circular containing full instructions in the art, which can be perfectly understood at once.

All letters must be addressed to A. T. PARSONS, 335 Broadway, New York. [Sept. 10, '56.-1m.
